A THREE - DECADE LEGACY OF CUSTOM - ORDER FURNITURE

made in the USA

Real. Natural. Beauty.

Luxurious yet strong, leather is the world's oldest and best natural material.

Welcome to McKinley

Come to us for beautifully handmade leather furniture, crafted by artisans in the foothills of North Carolina.

McKinley Leather Furniture Company was founded nearly 30 years ago by Jim Mitchell and Lori Sadowski, fourth of his five daughters. Pictured here are Jim and Lori, along with Lori's husband Joey and sons Joseph and Nicholas.

Family-Owned, Boutique Operation

While many upholstery furniture businesses are now part of huge corporate conglomerates, McKinley Leather Furniture has remained family-owned since 1989. An independent company, we are a boutique or “craft” operation. That means we are flexible, responsive, and easily accessible. And it means we will continue to be here for you and your customers for many years to come.

Always Made in the USA

We have a singular objective, designed to fill a void in the marketplace. It is our goal to design and build high quality leather furniture, right here in the USA, at competitive prices. If you were to stop by our full service facility near Hickory, North Carolina, you would see all aspects of our business are performed under one roof – from leather cutting and furniture making to sales and management. At McKinley, we offer a superior product backed by superior service.

The Artisan's Way

Our furniture makers are highly trained craftspeople, with many years of experience and specific expertise. But they are also artisans, approaching their work with the eye and sensibility of a painter or sculptor. To us, each sofa, loveseat or chair is indeed a work of art.

As our process begins, our artisans evaluate the natural characteristics and varying colorations of each top grain leather hide. The leather that ends up on McKinley furniture has been chosen, edited, and shaped to create a stunning and supple covering. Our artisans continue to carefully contemplate each additional step throughout the upholstery process. Every stitch. Every tuft. Every nail.

Our beautiful, soft leather surfaces are supported by the strongest foundation possible. We start with a reinforced solid hardwood frame and attach heavy-duty steel springs that are hand-tied in eight different directions.

At McKinley Leather, we don't make furniture. We create furniture. Each impeccable piece is bench-made, by hand, right here in North Carolina. Like an artist painting on a canvas, or turning a piece of pottery on a wheel, or honing a block of marble into a beautiful shape.

That's the artisan's way. That's the McKinley way.

S O F A S

Come to McKinley for superior artistry, quality, and craftsmanship. Choose from a large variety of beautiful styles – and customize that choice to suit the interior design. Handmade with heart, just for you.

Modern Art.

Our striking furniture is more than on trend.

It's superior quality – made to last until the next mid-century.

C H A I R S

Soft yet strong, our enduring leather furniture will stand the test of time, becoming more beautiful and comfortable with every passing year. Customize any McKinley chair to fit your specifications. Each piece is an original work of art.

Inspired by Andi

One of the McKinley team of innovators was Andi Mitchell, the youngest daughter. She always had an eye for fresh, inventive design. Even as a small child, Andi was drawn to beautiful things in nature and in art. She would find the pretty rock among gravel stones or the flowering herb in the grassy field. She would marvel at a delicate blown-glass vase or a simple etching. Tragically, Andi experienced a catastrophic brain injury and recently passed away. We will miss her sense of wonder and grace, as well as her creative vision, yet Andi will continue to inspire us. And to remind us to embrace each day with vigor and love and to embark on new ventures with courage. Because life can be forever changed in the blink of an eye.

Bits and Pieces

An excerpt from a poem by Lois A. Cheney, beloved by Andi.

*You find you are made of bits and pieces of all who have touched your life.
And you are more because of it.
And you would have been less if they
Had not touched you.
Pray to God that you can accept the Bits and pieces in humility and Wonder, and never question, and Never regret.*

MOTION HOME THEATER

At McKinley, we build furniture on a bench by hand, not on an assembly line. Soft leathers cover a strong foundation, with hardwood frames and top quality cushions. Motion components, too, are top quality. Relax, you're in a great place.

Quality Inside and Out

Like all pieces of McKinley Leather furniture, our sofa sleepers are impeccably designed and tailored, upholstered in fine, glove-soft leather. But underneath the elegant exterior, the McKinley Sofa Sleeper features a hard-working bi-fold mechanism and sturdy mattress support structure. The Kingsdown queen bed itself is durable and comfortable, with a 6.5" plush quilted-top mattress and insulated/padded innerspring unit. There's even a TV headrest function. We also offer an 11" luxury Air Dream mattress as an upgrade. In either case, your guests will rest well. Sweet dreams.

Features of Fine Furniture...

from the Inside Out

At McKinley Leather, our philosophy is to build furniture to last for many years – a lifetime, in fact – if the leather is maintained properly. We believe that a high quality piece of leather furniture will not only be upholstered in high quality top grain leather, but will also be constructed using the finest materials and craftsmanship available. Therefore, underneath our beautiful, soft leather surface lays the strongest possible foundation to support our customers and their families.

We begin with a solidly built hardwood frame, double-dowelled and corner-blocked for reinforcement. Consumers should be wary of frames that are a combination of wood and metal or only metal. These frames are not built to withstand everyday use.

Next, and most importantly, the seat construction should have eight-way hand-tied coil springs for maximum durability and comfort. Inferior seat constructions such as no-sag springs tend to “bottom out” after several years of use. It is also preferable for the springs in eight-way hand-tied pieces with up to 12 coils per seat, space allowing.

The quality of the back construction is also essential. At McKinley Leather, we use sinuous wire springs in the backs of most pieces. This is a superior construction feature that provides unequalled back support and firmness.

Cushions are likewise crucial in determining quality and comfort. A minimum of 1.8 density (1.8 pounds per cubic foot) polyurethane foam is acceptable for seat cushions. Keep in mind that seat cushions that start soft tend to soften excessively in a relatively short time. Seat and back cushions should always be in casings to prevent them from losing their shape and breaking down.

The overall tailoring of the piece is one of the key indications of quality-upholstered furniture. At McKinley, each piece is handcrafted on a bench by one of our trained craftspeople. Therefore, a slight variation in each piece of furniture is to be expected. However, seat cushions should fit snugly, seams should be straight, and back cushions should be sized uniformly.

McKinley Leather Furniture Construction Facts

Bench-made by hand, our leather-upholstered furniture is high quality inside and out. Each piece is truly a work of art, crafted by skilled, experienced artisans in our large workshop in North Carolina.

Frames. Select kiln-dried hardwoods with a minimum of 5/4” stock. Frame joints are double-dowelled and corner-blocked. The corner blocks are glued and screwed into the frame for maximum strength and durability.

Base. The finest quality polypropylene is reinforced with resin-coated steel bands that run the length and width of the frame. Then, 8 gauge double-cone coils are clamped to the polypropylene four deep, or twelve coils per seat, and eight-way hand-tied.

Cushion. All loose seat cushions are 1.8 density or better urethane. Foam core wrapped with polyester fiber and enclosed in a casing, commonly known in the industry as a Polyfiber cushion. A more soft and inviting seat cushion, Crown Royal, is available at an up charge. Leather upholstery is not quite suited for Down cushioning for two reasons: 1. The required Down-proof ticking does not breathe as well as a standard muslin casing. 2. Leather does not breathe as well as fabric. The net effect is a cushion that is somewhat firmer than normal for “plush” Down seating. We do offer Royal Down as an upgrade, but we recommend our Crown Royal cushions, which provide the plush softness expected from down and continue to hold their shape over time.

Backs. Sinuous wire springs are used in the backs of pieces unless there are back pillows on the item. Back cushions are 100% polyester fiber or Dacron, baffled and sewn within a muslin casing.

Padding. Backs and arms are covered with a combination of fleecy cotton, urethane foam, polyester batting, 5/8” nylon-backed fibrous pad, or urethane foam, as dictated by styling. The outsides of all pieces are doubled-covered with trim pad.

Finish. All exposed wood is solid hard rock maple, with various standard finishes or one of our premium ones. Our premium finishes include the hand-rubbed J. Neal finishes that are distressed and rasped for an aged effect as well as the J. Neal Artisan Painted finishes.

Nails. Steel nails, in a variety of finishes, are individually driven by hand. Nail head trim may be added or removed to most styles upon request. There are three nail head sizes: small, medium or large. Brass nails can be applied head-to-head or spaced in a variety of configurations.

Executive swivels. Tilt-swivel mechanisms are by Collier-Keyworth. An ergonomic base with a gas lift is standard on some styles but can be added to others for an extra charge. The bases are 5-prong steel bases with wooden caps. Casters are a double-wheel Shepherd caster with antique brass or chrome hoods. They are for use on all surfaces.

Sleepers. All sleeper mechanisms are manufactured by HSM Solutions. The mattress is a 6" innerspring Queen size mattress from Kingsdown.

Cushion Options

Poly Fiber | Standard. Our Standard cushion is made with a 1.8 dense, 24 lb. compression polyurethane foam, which is then surrounded by polyester fiber for softness. The foam is encased in a polyester fiber sewn ticking. This fabric is UFAC approved and allows for the cushion to breathe. The foam seat offers a soft surface feel that conforms to the body. As needed, the actual construction of this cushion is modified to achieve the degree of softness desired.

Extra Firm. Same cushion core as above, but modified by increasing the compression for the extra firmness.

Spring Fiber. Within the center of the cushion, there is an encased spring coil unit that offers support. The spring coil unit is layered on all four sides with a 1 inch cap of 1.8 dense, 24 lb. compression, wrapped with polyester fibers and finally encased with the polyester fiber sewn ticking. The Spring Fiber cushion provides deep firm support.

Crown Royal. The central core is a 2.3 density high-resiliency Qualux foam with a 16 lb. compression. Then a 2 oz. plush fiber crown patch is inserted on the top and bottom, followed with a 2 oz. plush fiber wrap before being inserted into a non-woven polyester sewn ticking. Our Crown Royal cushion provides the highest crown and softest seat, yet will hold its shape better with use since the softness is achieved within the core itself as well as the fiber wrap.

Ultra Spring Down Cushion/MicroDown Back. Starting with a high quality Marshall spring unit featuring 2 inch coils, completely wrapped in 2 inch high resiliency foam, the cushion is topped with an all-feather/down bag with down-proof inner liner and ticking. We always recommend pairing this cushion with a MicroDown back pillow – a super comfortable microfiber and feather/down combination. The overall feel of this cushion/back pairing is dense and “meaty” but also soft with a superb memory-return.

Royal Down. The central core is the 2.3 density high-resiliency Qualux foam with a lower compression. Then a 2 oz. plush fiber crown patch is inserted on the top, followed by a layer of 2 oz. Plush fiber and finished off with a downproof ticking filled with a 50/50 down and feather/fiber blend.

About Leather

Leather is the oldest and best natural material. Leather hides have been tanned and used by humans since the very early days of recorded history. As a natural material, leather breathes and becomes even more comfortable and beautiful with age and use. Leather is durable and strong, yet smooth and soft, and as such is an unmatched covering for upholstered furniture. About 40 percent of all upholstered furniture sold is covered in leather; it is popular and highly desirable.

Leather Overview

Top grain leather . . .

- Resists tearing. Leather is 50 percent stronger than other upholstery materials, including along the seam.
- Will not crack. Today's tanning process actually seals the natural oils into the leather.
- Assumes body temperature in 30 seconds, so it is comfortable in all climates. It's neither cold in the winter nor hot in the summer (unlike vinyl).
- Is a natural material so it breathes and does not retain odors.
- Is fire-resistant and emits no toxic fumes when exposed to intense heat.
- Is easy to care for. Dusting or wiping with a mild solution of soapy water is usually all it requires. Do not use saddle soaps, waxes or polishes.
- Will stretch yet retain its shape, so it will look new for many years. In fact, leather's beauty increases as it ages and acquires a soft patina.

Price Differences

Like most products, leather upholstery is available at many price points. More often than not, pricing and quality differences are related to the value of the leather itself.

Leather is a generic term that refers to a tanned animal skin. But all leathers are not equal. Cowhide is preferable for upholstery leather because it has the most desirable appearance and texture or "hand," which is an industry term that describes the feel of the leather. The grain of cowhide tends to be smooth, lending itself to a "soft hand." Other animal hides are stiffer and coarser-grained and, therefore, not desirable as an upholstery material.

The term cowhide refers to leather made from cow skins; however, there are variations in the quality of cowhides as well. Here is information on the various types.

Types of Leather and Cleaning Codes

Comparison Between Semi-Aniline and Aniline Leathers

Consumers often ask whether or not the upholstered leather is "aniline dyed." Most consumers believe that aniline dyed leather is the best leather available because it has been dyed all the way through with the same color; thus, a hide will be the same color on both the front and back. Indeed, this is a feature of aniline dyed leather, but pure aniline leather features other characteristics that actually may not meet consumer needs. It's important to understand the differences between semi-aniline and aniline leathers. It is also important to know that one type is not more desirable than the other. In fact, each type of leather appeals to a different customer. In addition, the term "semi" is actually misleading; in this case, it does not mean "partial." A more appropriate name for semi-aniline leather would be "aniline-plus."

Aniline-plus or semi-aniline leathers (AP) are dyed in vats with aniline dyes that allow the color to permeate the entire hide, just as in aniline leathers. But with aniline-plus or semi-aniline leathers, the process goes a few steps further. After the leather is aniline dyed, a pigment color is applied to the top of the hide to guarantee a consistent color on the surface. Next, additional finishes may be applied to the leather by hand or by machine to impart an antique or fashionably distressed look. Finally, a clear protective coating is applied to make the leather more stain repellent and sun resistant. The sheen of this protective coating can range from a matte finish to a high gloss finish, with several variations in between.

Aniline dyed leathers (A) are also dyed in vats with aniline dyes that allow the color to permeate the entire hide. However, neither a surface pigment color nor a protective coating is applied. A hand antique finish may be applied. Because pure aniline leather does not have a pigment color applied to its top surface, there will be variations in color throughout. Also, the lack of a protective coating makes this leather more susceptible to staining and fading.

Comparison Between Full Grain and Corrected Grain Leather

Although McKinley Leather uses only full, top-grain leather, there are two types of top grain leather available — corrected grain and full grain. Corrected grain leather refers to leather that has been altered by buffing its surface to reduce scarring and marking. Full grain leather, on the other hand, is left in its natural state; nothing has been done to alter or enhance its grain.

Because each cowhide comes from an individual cow, each hide has different markings that reflect the lifestyle and personality of that cow. These markings include scars from barbed-wire cuts and insect bites, brands, stretch marks from the birthing process, neck wrinkles, etc. The amount and extent of these markings determine the quality of a top grain cowhide. One of the unique aspects of leather is that since no two cowhides are identical, no two leather sofas are identical. Every piece of leather furniture is truly an original. Also, there is indeed no such thing as a perfect or flawless piece of leather. Please note that some scarring is to be expected, even desired, because it indicates genuine proof of the natural origin of the leather.

Corrected grain. A top grain cowhide with excessive scarring is less desirable than a cleaner cowhide because the scarring reduces the yield of the hide. To obtain a better yield, hides with excessive scarring are often buffed to reduce these marks. The buffing process is similar to sanding a piece of wood; it alters the grain by sanding it to a smooth surface. On some hides the entire surface will be buffed smooth. Then a grain pattern will be mechanically printed on the hide. This is known as embossing. Other hides may only have random scars buffed out and the rest of the grain is left intact. Regardless of the amount of buffing, any hide in which the grain has been altered is referred to as a corrected grain leather. Corrected grain leather is as durable as full grain leather, but the buffing process reduces the natural softness.

Full, top grain. The grain in top full grain leather has not been altered. These hides have fewer scars, so it is unnecessary to alter their surface. Full grain hides are considered premium leather. They are softer than corrected grain hides. Full grain hides are often used for the more expensive semi-aniline and aniline leathers.

Comparison Between Top Grain and Split Hides

The outer layer of the cowhide is referred to as the “top grain.” The underlying layers are referred to as “split hides.”

The top grain is best suited for upholstery because it is the strongest and most durable part of the hide, yet it is soft and supple. In fact, top grain becomes increasingly supple and comfortable over the years and obtains a soft patina. If properly cared for, top grain leather upholstery should last indefinitely.

On the other hand, split hides are coarser and stiffer and tend to crack more easily. The average wearing time of split hides is five years. Split hides are better suited for the garment industry to make shoes, handbags, belts, etc., which are not expected to last more than a season or two.

Often, less expensive leather furniture is made of split hides instead of top grain leather. Split hides are available at a much cheaper price per square foot than top grain hides. In addition, there is more usable area of a split hide with less waste. A top grain hide will feature scars, scratches, and blemishes – all natural markings – that are carefully considered before placing within pattern pieces. Approximately 70 percent of a top grain hide is suitable for use. Because the split is a lower layer, there are no natural markings and approximately 90 percent can be used. For a manufacturer, using the inferior split hides is less expensive. But it’s important to remember that split hides are poor quality and will not wear well. This is one instance that the adage “you get what you pay for” applies. The price of leather furniture is generally based on the quality of the leather hides.

Aniline Plus Pigment or Semi-Aniline Leather

Cleaning code: AP

These leathers are often referred to as finished, full finished, semi-aniline, pigmented, protected or painted. These leathers have combined the best aspects of the natural leather product and the latest tannery technology, to create a product that is more uniform in appearance. Aniline-plus or protected leathers are the most common leathers, and for most consumers, the most practical. The pigments actually create a barrier on top of the leather hide, and depending on the heaviness of the application, the pigments may completely cover the surface and camouflage excessive scarring. The lighter the coating of pigment, the softer the feel of the leather. Lighter coatings may show more natural scarring, however.

Technical Definition. Aniline plus pigment leathers have been aniline dyed with an additional topcoat of pigments to ensure color consistency and/or to apply a special effect.

Consumer Definition. Aniline plus pigment (AP) leathers are the perfect choice for people who expect quality and high performance from their furniture. AP leathers have an outstanding durability level and are great for families. AP leathers will generally retain their original appearance and will last for many years.

Characteristics and Expectations

- Coloration will be consistent throughout the hide unless a special effect with multiple colors is employed.
- Serviceability, durability and cleanability are very good.
- Leather will wear consistently over time.

Aniline Leather

Cleaning code: A

These leathers are also called natural, naked or unprotected and are colored with transparent, penetrating dyes. This means that you are able to see the actual surface grain and markings. These leathers have little or no protective treatments applied to them.

Technical Definition. Aniline (A) leathers receive their color from aniline dyes and possibly a very light application of micro-pigments to help make it more usable. The grain retains its original state. Natural markings and characteristics are exhibited.

Consumer Definition. Aniline (A) leathers are for people who strive for the finer things in life and appreciate rare, natural beauty. Pure aniline leather offers the elegance and luxury of silk, with a sensational soft feel. As no two fingerprints are identical, no two pure aniline leathers are identical. Each hide has its own characteristic, such as color shading and healed scars that set it apart from all others. These leathers tend to have substantial dye lot variations, so it is recommended that a cutting be obtained from the factory prior to placing an order.

Characteristics & Expectations

- Color variations are to be expected throughout the hide.
- Healed scars and scratches are unique characteristics that will be incorporated into your upholstery.
- The hand (feel) is very soft and “buttery.”
- A rich patina develops with time, enhancing the appearance of the leather.
- Fading will occur if exposed to strong sunlight or excessive heat.
- Requires specialized cleaning products for more stubborn stains.

Pull-Up Leathers

Cleaning code: A

Pull-up leathers are infused with oils and/or waxes after tanning. The addition of these substances usually increases the softness and suppleness of a hide and always creates a pull-up two-tone effect when the hide is upholstered to a furniture frame.

Technical Definition. Pull-up leathers have been colored with aniline dyes that are impregnated with natural-based oils and/or waxes. The oils and waxes tend to darken the original aniline dye coloration, but “pull up” the lighter color when stretched and pulled. This pull-up effect occurs as the furniture progresses through the upholstery process — as the leather is stretched over the frame, the lighter base color becomes visible. The pull-up effect tends to be more pronounced in areas where the leather is stretched in two different directions, like the front of the arm and all corners. The oils and waxes provide even more beautiful shading and unique, subtle color variations. This aniline dyeing process allows the scars, scratches and wrinkles that occur naturally on the leather hides to show through the finish.

Consumer Definition. Pull-up leathers come from remarkable hides — completely natural, unaltered and rugged, yet soft and supple to the touch. Pull-up leathers require little maintenance since the original ruggedness has been amplified. Surface scratches are more pronounced but can be removed by hand-rubbing them with fingertips. The warmth of the human hand releases the natural oils, blending away the marks.

Characteristics and Expectations

- Greatly desired patina comes from natural body oils.
- Pronounced color variations visible throughout the hides and drastic dye lot variations from different production lots.
- Fading will occur if exposed to strong sunlight or excessive heat.
- Never use detergents, soaps or chemicals to clean the surface, as they will remove the natural oils in the leather.

Nubuck leather

Cleaning code: N

Nubuck leather is an aniline leather hide with an abraded or brushed surface that results in a slight nap and a soft, velvety texture. Some consumers will confuse nubuck leathers with suede. But suede is the lower quality underside or split portion of a leather hide, while Nubuck leathers are top grain.

Technical Definition. Nubuck is a pure aniline leather which has a slight nap effect produced by the removal of the epidermis or hair cell layer. Not to be confused with suedes, Nubucks are top grain leathers and are much more serviceable and durable than inferior suedes.

Consumer Definition. Nubuck leathers make a fashion statement with their exotic textures and sensuous appearance. When used as an accent piece, this leather adds an attention-getting, creative touch and upgrades any room.

Characteristics and Expectations

Drastic colorations will vary throughout the hide.

Healed scars and scratches are unique characteristics and will be incorporated into the design.

A luxurious hand (feel) along with a slight nap is to be expected.

The open nap makes a nubuck more susceptible to fading when exposed to sunlight or excessive heat sources.

Nubucks tend to grab soil and body oils, so it is imperative that proper cleaning and maintenance kits are utilized.
